Forgotten Books, 2017. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The 1939 Legenda We have a choice of two large fields in which to work. There is the problem of setting our own house in order, which means taking an interest in our national government, and in furthering the democratic ideal of America by acting as progressive citizens. Or we can turn our eyes abroad, endeavouring to reach a solution to the international tangle - a solution which is neither a blind insistence on maintaining an unjust status quo, nor a solution which discards the basic ideals and standards governing human relationships. We do not have to solve the problems. We can pass them on to Other generations. But the best that is in us, the ideals which we own, demand that we face our problems squarely and take forward steps. We must seek the solution. College men and women as a whole realize that war is never a solution, but we are often surprised to find that few people outside our circles share that conviction. -it is up to us to counteract mob psychology; our reason can and must control our emotion. When we entered college in the fall of 1935, all four classes consisted of war babies, born between the years of 1914 and 1918. Today in Russia, Germany, France and England - throughout the world, they are mobilizing those war babies, our contemporaries, our potential friends or our potential enemies. We do not wish to kill them; we do not even wish to hate them. For, wherever educated humanity exists, there live the seeds of common ambitions and ideals. To share those ideals and to spread them, in sincere cooperation, is better than to fight for...
