Esoteric Publishing, United Kingdom, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Purple is a positive, optimistic book in the Futurist. Technology Speculation. Where Are We Going? What Happens Next? Abundance, post Singularity, genre. Purple is about the future of the human project. It s about where humans have been, where we are now, and more importantly where we are going. We humans are the only known technological civilisation in the universe. We have built a world of information and knowledge, and we are getting better every hour. Technology is all we have, and we have built something that is simply too big to fail. Purple is a book of big ideas, exorcising the extremes of conservation groupies, climate change prophets and Green politics. Purple has always been the colour of excess, luxury and extravagance. Purple is the new Green. Nothing is running out. We are surrounded by infinite amounts of matter, energy and time. Our only visible deficit is information. Purple is an antidote to negativity, to a gathering hoard of doom scribblers, peddling an increasingly dark melancholic vision, constituting a denial of hope and a lack of kindness to billions of our fellow humans for an admixture of odd philosophical and quasi-religious reasons. An ever-expanding library of disaster porn, portrays humans as a disease, or a pestilent burden to the planet, a temporary natural aberration needing correction. Their gloomy fatalism is absent any celebration of human progress, or acknowledgment of future prospects. We are rarely told how almost everything is improving. Rainforests, oil, water, fresh air, fish, the ice caps, and a long list of assorted human necessities, all allegedly squandered out of existence. Technology is our enemy. The silly spectre of Malthus stalks the halls. All is negative up to...
