Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A Statistical and Descriptive Poem of Texas This poem was inspired from traveling over the State Incorporating statistics correctly to date For Texas had come to the front and now boldly stands Proclaiming her greatness and fertility of lands The Lone Star flag is majestically unfurled And is gracefully waving kind greetings to the world Inviting capital and industry to come and partake Of fruits derived from what development can make The representations of Texas are all quite true This poem does not tell of the old state but the new Once a hard country on Women and Oxen twas said But now Texas on Wheels, fully attests what is read Of the Southwestern Empire, her grandeur and beauty Made perfect by the efficient discharge of her duty. Texas raises yearly one fourth of the cotton made For the farmers are expert with the plow, hoe and spade Has some of the best sugar lands in the United States Many railroads traversing the country with low rates Forty million acres of timber and much lumber And different kinds of wood almost without number There s walnut dogwood pine maple live oak elm and gum Mesquite bois d are cedar, water oak, rose and plum] There are specimens of fire-clay, hydraulic limestone Lignite, vegetable mark coal-ore and all her own Waiting for capital and industry to combine And develop the natural resources so fine, To tell all about this mammoth Industrial State, It would take many volumes well written to relate.
