Doubleday Canada Ltd, 2000. Hardcover. Condition: New. Dust Jacket Condition: New. 1st Edition. Book Description: In this beautifully illustrated book, fifteen of the most compelling episodes in Canada's past are presented, each by a young narrator who witnessed history being made. Using a key photograph as the starting point for each chapter, the individual narrators lead the reader through an exploration of a particular moment in Canadian history, explaining the photograph and chronicling the events of the decade in which it occurred. Each section also contains 10 to 15 additional captioned images, which help the reader envision the past and enhance his or her experience of the events. Parents, children and teachers will all benefit from this exciting true story of Canada's past, which promises to become an essential component of every home and school library. From the Back Cover "A splendid collection of rare photographs artfully selected and captioned. Past and future collide constantly which gives Canada: Our Century enormous energy. " $\frac{3}{4}$ Martin Levin, The Globe and Mail "Mark Kingwell and Christopher Moore are to be congratulated for avoiding clichés in their choice of old news photographs and for their telling cutlines. " $\frac{3}{4}$ Mordecai Richler, Saturday Night "Canada: Our Century is a wondrous thing. clever, canny photography meant to be read and savoured. " $\frac{3}{4}$ The Edmonton Journal About the Author Rick Archbold has written or co-written 18 non-fiction books including The Discovery of the Titanic, which he co-wrote with Robert Ballard, the man who discovered the wreck in 1985. The book has gone on to sell more than a million copies in its various editions worldwide. Rick's latest publication is Conversations with Mummies. When he's not editing or writing or teaching editing, Rick Archbold is often to be found paddling his canoe in the waters of Lake Joseph, Muskoka.
