

Spectres in the Smoke

By Tony Broadbent

M P Publishing Limited, United Kingdom, 2012. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 213 x 137 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. Jethro, the renowned Cockney cat burglar and jewel thief, has been pushed out onto the slippery rooftops of London again by Colonel Walsingham of MI5. Jethro does a creep in the posh Mayfair house of a certain Baron Belfold that sets in motion a tale of dark and deadly dealings amongst England s aristocracy that mixes sex-orgies and blackmail with politics. In a tale that not only touches upon a Royal cover-up of the Duke of Windsor s alleged dealings with Adolf Hitler during the War, but also on the Government s attempts to root out Fascist sympathisers and Communist moles from the corridors of power in Whitehall. Meanwhile, Walsingham s secret string pulling has had unintended consequences in London s gangland, and has resulted in Jethro s best friend, Seth, being savagely beaten up by the Emperor of Soho s thugs. Seeking retribution, Jethro turns to Jack Spot, another of London s gang bosses, for help and then burgles Walsingham s house to show him that no deed is ever without its consequences. The burglary leads to a...
