The date stands a poor chance of recognition just now with the Columbian Exposition before us and a surfeit of national centennials behind. Yet that year marks the fulfillment of the moral and intellectual promise of the nation's glorious youth. The Declaration of Independence, the noblest expression ever given to the rights of man, remained a mere form of words till Lincoln announced in 1862 the Declaration of Emancipation. In the terrible years which followed the message was re-written in blood; but through Lincoln's first draft, which is now among the treasures of our own state library, the nation was purged of the foul stain of slavery and consecrated forever to freedom. The enslavement of man is a survival of barbarism; civilization, by the potency of science, makes a thrall of nature herself. The genius of Lincoln rose to the height of the great occasion. With one hand he smote the fetters of the slave, and with the other he joined in a splendid effort to subjugate nature. On the second of July, 1862, while the announcement of emancipation was still on his desk, he Signed the act of congress, donating public lands for the establishment of colleges of agriculture and mechanic arts. This act had been introduced into congress by the Hon. Justin S. Morrill, who after the lapse of a generation, still adorns the senate and whose name will live with later generations...
