Outskirts Press, United States, 2012. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 226 x 150 mm. Language: English Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Lynn Lemieux feels trapped like a bee in a Mason jar. This is his second case and in 1957 is assigned to the post office in Baron, Maine. He is allotted a small room attached to the Postmaster's office. He witnesses an incident that involved the postmaster and his secretary in a romantic embrace. This encounter has him suspended for thirty days from no fault of his own. He is jubilant to be free of the confinement and pressure and now able to return home to visit his family and investments in Texas. He receives word that the ninety-eight acre farm he purchased while on his first assignment in Coltharp, Texas is surrounded by oil profiteers. While traveling back to Texas he is exhausted. Searching for a Holiday Inn in Memphis, Tennessee he is in an automobile accident. Lynn is confined to a local hospital and is in a deep coma for several days and he dreams, dreams, dreams. He is in stride with one of the best one-hundred sprinters in LSU history. He loses the race by one stride but his Uncle Jack gives him encouragement and states that he is the best in his book. After graduation from Louisiana State University, Lynn is accepted in the Post Office's Secret Service (Postal Inspector). His first case assignment is to a Second Class Post Office in East Texas. He has a difficult task trying to solve a situation involving one or more of the postal employees. His station is in a gallery built by postal specifications, above all employees surrounding the interior walls, to observe their operations and actions without their knowledge of his presence. Lynn...
