Excerpt from Journals of the Continental Congress, 1774-1789, Vol. 16: Edited From the Original Records in the Library of Congress, January 1-May 5, 1780 In the year 1780 the difficulties which beset the Continental Congress were almost overwhelming. On January 10, the Board of War reported that, in spite of the necessities of the troops, no clothing could be bought, because there was no money to pay for it; on March 10, the Board of Treasury said that the commissary general of issues had announced that there was not bread enough on hand to feed the army for ten days longer; on April 4, a committee reported: There is no money in the Treasury and scarce any provisions in the public magazines. The currency had depreciated to such a point that forty dollars of continental money had not the purchasing power of one specie dollar. An alarming note from the Minister of France was read, on January 28, setting forth the impending danger of armed mediation between America and Great Britain, and that the mediator would be certain to insist...
