Excerpt from Report of the Superintendent of the United States Naval Observatory: For the Fiscal Year Ending June 30, 1900: Sir, I have the honor to submit the annual report of the operations of the United States Naval Observatory for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900. Department of Astronomical Observations. The work of the year in this department may be summarized as follows: Prof. William Harkness, who retired from active service on December 15, 1899, was succeeded in the astronomical directorship by Prof. Stimson J. Brown, the senior professor of mathematics on duty at the Observatory. Professor Brown's first duty was as member of a board of examiners, to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Professor Harkness by the selection of a suitable candidate for appointment as professor of mathematics in the Navy. The labors of this board, of which Prof. William Hendrickson, U. S. N., was senior member, resulted in the selection and appointment of Prof. W. S. Eichelberger. In this connection it is pertinent to observe that the present condition of the astronomical staff of the Observatory is highly satisfactory, and gives promise for the future. The vacancies, caused by the rapid successive retirement of the older professors, have all been filled by young men of marked ability, and the Observatory has followed its traditional policy in this respect, and has every reason to anticipate a renewed activity and a period of harmony, industry, and usefulness. All the astronomical instruments of the Observatory have been steadily and continuously in use during the year on every clear night and day. The XXVI-inch equatorial telescope has been employed on the observation of difficult double stars, the satellites of the...
