What the fuck were you thinking coming here, Tanya? he hissed at her. Tanya was fighting back the tears. Look, Bishop, I really didn't want to come but I can't raise him knowing that his father is capable of taking care of him but won't because he's afraid to lose his woman. Quinton is your son, Bishop. I didn't make him by myself. How can you just go from telling me I was the most special thing in the world one day to denying your son the next? she asked. Look at him, Bishop! she yelled at him as she held the baby up. You look at him and tell me that this is not your son. Bishop knew the minute he'd laid eyes on him that Quinton was his son. He just didn't want to lose Anna. She was his world. But Bishop knew he couldn't deny his son. He didn't deserve it. Bishop grew up without his father, which was one of the main reasons he was in the streets now. He didn't know how he was going to do it, but he had to be there for him. Can I hold him? I mean, is it ok? he asked. Tanya hesitated before she handed Quinton to him. Bishop looked down at him and he felt a lump in his throat. Damn. I'm sorry, T. I fucked up. I got caught up and trying to keep everybody happy. I fucked up bad. It wasn't supposed to happen like this, he said as a tear fell down his face while he looked into the eyes of...
