The M Function Based on NK Formula of Stuart Kauffman Richard Baker and Michael Baron, Ph.D. $M = f(e, in)$ is a statement of the NK formula proposed by Dr. Kauffman as the process by which an agent may search a landscape by manipulating various characteristics of itself. It is a statement of theory proposed in a mathematical form that generates the invisible hand Dr. Kauffman predicted that we were able to populate with data from our sample. As a result we have been able to empirically validate the research originally presented in Bourdieu s Demon (See Figures 1 and 2) in The Santa Fe Conjecture, in the tests reported in Premium Knowledge and most recently in the M (Meme) Function Careful analysis of real life data from 2500 plus affluent individuals reported in our first volume demonstrates that these respondents did just as sociologists and biologist Richard Dawkins predicted. They constructed complexes of objects, images and relations (LifeStyles) to match the visions and memories in their minds. In our presentation we review the how each of the very recognizable elements of the M Function formula ($M = f(e, in)$) works in our daily lives: - e are the five categories of personal needs that are the sources of all energy; - I are the multiple sources of information and personal experience, and the rates and ratios in which we consume them. -Most significantly f is the overall algorithm that (in the chart, above) determines if our needs are consuming and transforming information into memes at an overall red, yellow or green rate and that spins us into a socio-economic laminate with similar cells. The M Function is a dynamic force...
