Excerpt from Camping Out in the Yellowstone: Letters Written in 1882, by Mrs. Mary B. Richards to the Salem Observer The lake is very large, its shores sinuous, and with the mountains so nearly encircling it, forms a picturesque background to the near and strangely grouped bathers and spectators. We found the water buoyant, more so than that of the Dead Sea; not bitter but much saltier. The bucket of fresh water placed in every dressing room is an absolute necessity for removing the salt which incrusts the skin on leaving the lake. Sabbath morning the 5th, we joined the worshippers in the temple, a building whose egg-shaped roof figures in every picture of Salt Lake City. The Temple is a strange and ugly edifice, constructed throughout in defiance of architectural grace, but answering the purpose of its builders. Ten thousand persons can be simultaneously sheltered from sun or rain on comfortable seats; can enjoy perfect ventilation and hear distinctly the voice of a speaker or the faintest note of the organ. A choir of over a hundred voices took places: men...
