Excellent e-book and useful one. It is written in straightforward phrases rather than confusing. I am just very happy to explain how here is the finest publication I have got read through in my very own lifestyle and might be the greatest book for possibly.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED BEFORE THE ALUMNI AND GRADUATING CLASS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, AT CHAPEL HILL, ON THE AFTERNOON OF JUNE THIRD, 1841 (CLASSIC REPRINT) (PAPERBACK)

Forgotten Books, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from An Address Delivered Before the Alumni and Graduating Class of the University of North Carolina, at Chapel Hill, on the Afternoon of June Third, 1841 There is one feeling of disappointment, which every young man, who-exchanges the seclusion of a college for the hustle and business of the world, is bound to meet and endure. He finds the weapons of college warfare are not those precisely suited to collisions with men in active life. His Diploma, for which he so long labored, and for which he burned the midnight lamp, and surrendered so many hours, which in vain allured him to idleness and pleasure, he finds entitles him to but a small share of the honor and consideration of the world, which he had fondly anticipated. He comes at length to see. In it but the certificate from his masters, of an apprenticeship honorably ended, authorizing him to commence work on his own account. His classical lore which was to be the open sesame to honor and consideration, he carries to a market where few appreciate, and still fewer will purchase. His small stock of literature and science, which he has collected with toil and gloated over with the feelings of the miser, when he surveys his hidden gold, is converted by the disenchanting touch of the world, into rubbish and stone, not equal to the purchase of one poor penny's worth of bread. He finds that all these things have no exchangeable value, though his after experience teaches him, that they are not without their use. The mental training which he has received in their acquisition, has imparted powers which properly exercised, may enable...
