On the Physiological Standardization of Extracts of the Posterior Lobe of the Pituitary Body It is a position, however, which fortunately is quite unnecessary and easily to be avoided. The United States Pharmacopoeia has officially laid down a theoretical strength for this extract. This Report recommends the adoption of the same theoretical strength for this country, and indicates a method by which a preparation of uniform activity can be made and used as a standard of reference. It may be noted that the British Pharmacopoeia has not yet recognized the existence of this potent and common remedy. It is earnestly hoped that early action may be taken as the result of representations made in detail by the Medical Research Committee in 1916 to Mr. Asquith's Reconstruction Committee, and later in 1919 to the President of the Local Government Board (subsequently the Minister of Health), upon the urgent need for official standards of value and authenticity for drugs of this kind and for the numerous biological preparations, sera, and the like, used in medical...
