In the little volume now submitted to the public, I have endeavoured, without attempting to interfere with the legitimate functions of the veterinary surgeon - to whom recourse must always be had in serious cases - to indicate the course of treatment to be pursued in most of the ordinary ailments that horseflesh is heir to, and to offer such suggestions as may save the amateur horse-keeper the expense of a doctors bill when the trouble which afflicts his charge is one of a common-place, or, at all events, of a not unusual description. I can, at least, claim that what I have written emanates strictly from a twenty years practical - not theoretical - experience amongst all classes of horses, and especially with hunters and steeplechasers, which, by reason of their several vocations, are peculiarly liable to accident, if not to disease. In treatment of every description, it cannot be too strongly borne in mind that Natures tendency...
