Criminal Aggression: By Whom Committed? (Classic Reprint) (Paperback)

By Edward Atkinson

Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Criminal Aggression: By Whom Committed? In November, 1808, a danger dimly foreseen that this country might be committed to acts of criminal aggression which the President had denounced in April in his message to Congress giving the reasons why the oppressive rule of Spain should be removed by force from the Island of Cuba. Many persons who had believed and who still believe that the ride of Spain could have been removed without resort to war, yet when war was declared gave their support to the Government and their approval to every measure deemed necessary to the conduct of the war. A few distrusted the sincerity of the President and anticipated the evil events that have ensued. The writer was not then one of those who shared in the distrust of the Executive, although he feared the influence of those by whom he then believed and still believes the President had been forced to a premature and unseasonable exercise of force. Is there not sufficient proof of a combination organized for the purpose of criminal aggression which the President...
