The Board of Natural Resources and Conservation of the Department of Registration and Education, And, II. The Illinois State Geological Survey in War Mineral Research By July, 1940, the first unit of the Natural Resources Building was nearing completion, and members of the Geological and Natural History Survey staffs were moving into their new offices and laboratories. The Natural Resources Building in its present form comprises this first unit, which was so planned that new units might be added conveniently and economically as expanding programs and staffs made necessary an increase of floor space. Although the exterior of the building conforms to the stately Georgian design of other campus building, utility rather than beauty was the guiding principle in designing, constructing, and equipping the interior. However, the foyer illustrates the decorative possibilities of certain Illinois building materials, and many of the laboratories exemplify the functional beauty concept of modern design. Efficient use of floor space is evident throughout the building. Not only is full use made of the three main floors for offices and laboratories; ingenious planning made possible the natural lighting of the basement, permitting laboratories and offices on this floor, as well as storage rooms, and a well-insulated roof allowed utilization of the fourth floor for offices, drafting rooms, libraries, and laboratories.
