A Permanent Eclipse Committee of Fellows of the Royal and Royal Astronomical Societies has been formed for the consideration of the observation of future eclipses, and the discussion of records of those in the past. Solar Activity in 1894. The principal feature of the solar activity in 1894 as compared with 1893 has been a distinct falling off in the mean daily spotted area. December 1893 had been an exceptionally active month, the mean daily area being larger than for any other month during the present cycle, except August 1893, and the number of distinct groups and of separate spots being even disproportionately great. The decline which was witnessed in the early days of 1894 was therefore the more marked, and except for the appearance of a specially fine group towards the end of February, that decline continued until the end of March. A revival then set in, and the next four months showed very nearly as heavy a record as any similar period in 1893. From the end of July, however, a second decline has been manifest, and has continued with irregularities, to the end of the year. There has also been a continuance of the decline in latitude already noticed in the previous year, and the southern hemisphere has maintained the predominance over the northern which had been a marked feature of 1893. According to the figures given by Professor Tacchini, the area of the sunspots in 1894 was about 74 percent, of...
