Her rare simplicity of style, and her facility and felicity of minute description, combine to impart a unique interest to her recollections of the Emerson home in the Summer Street parsonages. Madam Bradford s Letter. Dear Sir; I went to reside with Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Emerson in 1806, Mr. Emerson being chosen my guardian. They resided in Summer Street, Boston. I was in the family between four and five years, while the children were quite young. Mrs. Emerson was a lovely woman, very superior and very religious. I do not remember ever to have seen her impatient, or to have heard her express dissatisfaction at any time. The daily duties and cares of domestic life never appeared appeared to annoy her. She certainly must have exercised great self-control. She was very industrious, and, in order to save time, kept her knitting in a table drawer in the parlor, and would take it out when receiving friendly calls. She had the care of the silver communion plate, and was very particular that it should be made bright before use. I think a man, who was the sexton of the church, came once a month to attend to it. Mrs. Emerson often went to the ironing-board to iron Mr. Emerson s bands. She could trust no one to do them. They were made of lawn. It was the custom at that time for settled ministers to wear bands...
