In contrast to the overabundance of writings about martial arts that are often promotional and misinformative, there are rare works by scholars that are praiseworthy for their sincere, unbiased approach to writing. This is the very definition of scholarly. This two-volume anthology brings together the best scholarly works published in the Journal of Asian Martial Arts on the topic of teaching and learning Japanese martial arts. In this volume, you'll find ten chapters that dive deep into Japanese martial traditions, combining aspects of history and culture that explain how teaching methods developed and evolved. Harrison-Peppers chapter sets the tone with a focus on the fundamental student-teacher relationship that is responsible for the transmission of any art. She uses sociological and performance studies to analyze the martial arts maturing process. Since Japan was ruled by a warrior class for nearly 700 years, it is necessary to understand the method by which warriors were educated through the ryuha system. Nyle Mondays chapter presents this system. Dr. Hershey explores the way in which a martial art can serve as a vehicle for non-discursive intercultural exchange in the teaching process. His chapter provides a discussion of the importance of embodying the feeling or aesthetic of a particular system as a way of knowing and understanding martial techniques. The next three chapters were originally prepared for a meeting of the Association for Asian Studies. Dr. Varley states that most who have written about martial arts practice are not trained scholars. He discusses the state of writing in this field and introduces the other authors. Dr. Hurst discusses the characteristics of the martial arts that place them into the category of artistic ways. This reflects the...
