Excerpt from The Photo Playwright, Vol. 1: April, 1912 The first flash across the brain when one writes a play is the motive of the story. The prime essential is the idea. It is the essence of the plot, but it is without avail if it provides no opportunity for silent acting. As in a play, the construction of the moving picture scenario embodies four stages: Introduction, development. Climax and finale. The introduction should group the characters and indicate their relations at a glance for there is no time, as in stage representation, to gradually introduce the dramatic personae and explain the plot. A point that adds greatly to the possibilities of a successful picture is the introduction of an element of suspense. This may be in the form of either an interrupted situation, or what is considered still stronger, the manipulation of an anti climax; that is, a sudden but temporary reversal or change of situation between the climax and finale. In comedies, extremely complicated relations should be avoided, not only because this is not the best form of Comedy, but..
