Excerpt: . . . to have underground pipes deliver raw sewage from homes directly into rivers and streams without any intervening treatment. Americans began to ask, is this the best we can do I can attest to the fact that Vermonters answered with a vehement no. They demanded actions to solve our environmental problems. In 1970, I was the State Attorney General of Vermont. My office worked to create Vermonts Act 252, which enacted the toughest water pollution laws in the country at that time. I had the honor of testifying before the committee during Senator Muskies chairmanship during the first phases of the debate on the Clean Water Act. Some of the concepts in Act 252 are today part of the Federal water pollution laws. Congress also answered no to the question, is this the best we can do. Led by the champions like Senator Muskie and Baker, they came together on a bipartisan basis to override President Nixons veto of the Clean Water Act. Originally enacted in 1948, the 1972 Clean Water Act completely revised the existing statute and created a clean water program that we know today. The Act consists of two major parts--regulations on industries and cities designed to reach a goal of zero discharge of pollutants; and the authorization of Federal financial assistance to wastewater treatment. We have made progress. Virtually every community served by the publicly owned treatment works is served by a plant that uses secondary treatment. This progress was facilitated by the Federal assistance provided for municipal wastewater treatment plant construction. Despite progress on these and other issues,...
