Excerpt from The Dominion of Canada as a Market for British Goods: Being a General Survey of the Canadian Market Under Post-War Conditions, From the Point of View of the British Exporter and of the Manufacturer Contemplating the Development of Branch Factories Overseas By Sir W. Peter rylands, President of the Federation of British Industries, 1920 and 1921. To help to stimulate trade relations between the United Kingdom and the various units of the British Commonwealth is one of the most worthy of tasks that can be undertaken by a member of the British peoples. I welcome the appearance of this book at the present time, and hope it will be read by manufacturers and traders in all parts of the Empire. A fruitful and healthy trade condition is the strongest bond for securing Imperial unity. The mutual benefits and prosperity gained by such a condition are the surest guarantees for the increasing in uence of British civilisation throughout the world. All men and women in the British Isles must look with pride and admiration at the rapid advance of the great Dominions. Their thriving and expanding industries are the promise of a great future. Although the United Kingdom is more densely populated and in a state of higher industrial and financial organisation, yet the day is not far distant when the greatness of the British Empire will be mainly concentrated in the new, vast countries overseas. At the present day we in this country are dependent upon supplies of food and raw material from overseas. It would not be possible for us to maintain our enormous population and keep our factories working without excellent trading conditions with these new countries...
