Excerpt from Theological Colleges: Their Aim and Spirit: Illustrated by Two Sermons Preached Respectively, on the Vigil and the Festival of St. Peter, 1881, in Connection With the Festival, and Opening of the New Chapel, of the Salisbury Diocesan Theological College Such cases, were they very rare, would suffice to justify the existence of a Theological College. Their frequency demonstrates its necessity. Perhaps the chief use of Theological Colleges is in providing men with an opportunity of testing and deepening their own convictions. The quiet and seclusion, once perhaps to be found at Oxford and Cambridge; the regularity of life the community of aim and interests, of faith and life, silently known and recognised, as it can rarely be the frequent services and sacraments; the aids to earnest study - these are the boons which a Theological College may super-add to the advantages of an University education.
