

Building The Next Ark: How Ngos Work To Protect Biodiversity.

By Gunter, Jr., Michael M.

Dartmouth College Press, Hanover / University Press of New England, Lebanon, 2004. Softcover. Condition: New. 276 pages. Softcover. New book. ECOLOGY. A timely study of how NGOs are uniquely positioned to help prevent the greatest environmental crisis of all. A new ark is needed. With the extinction of perhaps 50,000 species per year, we are at a critical juncture in history. Ominous storm clouds have gathered to threaten humanity's most basic resource of all, the diversity of life on earth. And the danger facing us—the possibility of losing forever hundreds of thousands of species with whom we share this planet—is magnified by the fact that this rapid decline of global biodiversity is too vast to be handled solely by states or their existing international institutions. Michael Gunter suggests that a fundamentally different route is needed to stem the ongoing extinction crisis. In an eye-opening appraisal of the current threat to global biodiversity, one that truly approaches a deluge of biblical proportions, he concludes that nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) are the best and perhaps only actors situated to negotiate the powerful array of political and economic interests involved in species loss as well as species preservation. Showing how NGOs fit into the...
