Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from My Abyssinian Journey: A Journey Through Abyssinia From the Red Sea to Nairobi in 1906 in the Days of Emperor Menelik The streets were simply alley-ways, about a yard wide; the over hanging balconies of some of the houses and hotels almost completely shut off the sunlight, and from some of these balconies it was possible to reach across to the house on the opposite side of the street Did one happen to meet a donkey or mule with pack-saddles coming along the street, it was necessary to step aside into some doorway to allow it to pass. There was not the remotest attempt at sanitation, and the streets were running with filth and refuse of all kinds exuding a noisome stench. Some of the houses were one-storey and others two storey buildings, but all had flat roofs, and one could only pity the poor wretches living in such quarters; at night they swarmed on to the roofs for fresh air. Such a place might be a veritable city of plague, but fortunately it was often visited by torrential rains, which...
