Excerpt from Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News, Vol. 25: January 20, 1921 The accompanying illustration depicts a fuel oil storage tank made entirely of concrete. This tank has a capacity of fifteen thousand gallons and is accessible only through a man hole in the top. A new building was erected over the tank, but either through damage caused in the construction of the new building, or through a slight earthquake, the tank was found to have developed a serious leak. As soon as the fuel oil was exhausted it was decided to have an examination made so as to ascertain the location and conditions of the break. It is well known that there is great danger prevalent for a man to enter an empty tank that has held crude oil. A battery of three vacuum cleaners was connected to three pieces of iv2-inch pipe that reached the bottom of the pit where the heavy gases lay. These cleaners were in operation for four hours before a man ventured down. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
