In most cases this does not seem a positive one as can be seen at first glance in Matthew G. Lewis The Monk (1796). Most likely this also reflects a tendency of the postenlightenment period in which it was written. I will argue that religion in The Monk but also in Dracula is indispensable. Furthermore, I will give evidence for the thesis that religion in Dracula is not merely reduced to an apotropaic device against vampires but has a high significance for the whole of the characters' lives. This is further emphasised in the last part of the paper, in which I will compare the endings...
