Excerpt from America and the Young Intellectual Mr. Sherman pictures himself at a typical American public dinner, which H. L. Mencken might characterise as a Rotary Club jubilee entirely controlled by rugged right-thinkers. At all events there is much talk of progress and efficiency, increased production, sanitation, and sobriety; and a future republic flowing with milk and honey so potent that everybody will then have a flivver, a phonograph and hundreds of classical records, a patent sewage system, and a wireless telephone, as well as an individual aeroplane to transport him from his immaculate home to his electric-tractor-ploughed field or to his model factory. Churches and universities will flourish, and all the highroads be macadamized. Citizens of this ideal state will be diseaseless, active, moral, and above all prosperous. The picture of the future United States is the conventional roseate Utopia dreamed of by all forward-lookers and mechanical engineers. It is to be American through and through - that is, shot through and through with moral idealism. Perhaps as an after-thought, the chairman of the dinner then calls upon a young literary artist to sketch a place in our programme of democratic progress for art, music, literature, and the like - in short, for the superfluous things. The phrase grates on Mr. Sherman, as evidently it grated on the young literary artist in question. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
