Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Excerpt from A View of the Rights and Wrongs, Power and Policy, of the United States of America Coffee, sugar, tea, tobacco, cotton, rice, peltries, and even ginseng and ?axseed, with a prolific et caetera of minor articles, have become as necessary to the comfort of mankind as ?our, Wine, and oil to their subsistence. With the former, the world has but a late acquaintance and, constituting, as they do, so material a portion of food, and so delightful a part of raiment, it cannot be surprising that commerce should amplify in proportion to their demand and usefulness, or that every region should be explored to procure them. With 1200 miles of sea coast on the east, and a chain of corresponding lakes and navigable waters on the west, wanting almost-everythiiiig Eumpe can afford, and with the ability to supply almost every thing Europe can desire, it would seem as if nature had designated the United States for a great commercial empire. The prodigious and unexampled progress this country has made in prosperity, population, and power, since the adoption of the federal constitution, though not, perhaps, so great as it would have been had it not been for the British treaty and its effects, are to be ascribed not more to the excellence of that constitution, than to the extension of our trade, favoured and forced as it has been by the remoteness of our situation from the devastating commotions of Europe, and to the pacific neutrality so wisely adopted and honestly pursued by the American government. With such natural advantages as we enjoy, a free trade is a greater blessing than the lenity of our laws, high price of...
