La Russie a eu des princes de genie et des diplomates consommes; a-t-elle eu de grands ministres ? C est une question qui se presente a l esprit au moment ou la conclusion de la paix ouvre une carriere nouvelle a l empire des tsars. Depuis que Pierre le Grand a cree la nation russe et lui a legue son ambition, les personnages qui ont continue son role se sont preoccupes avant tout des succes de la politique exterieure. L administration de Catherine II et de Nicolas Ier n etait guere inspiree que par des pensees de conquete. Alexandre II a manifeste le desir d inaugurer pour ses etats l ere des travaux de la paix; ce ne sont plus des conquerants ambitieux ni de subtils diplomates qu il faut a la Russie, ce sont des ministres reformateurs. Developper l industrie, defricher les steppes, civiliser les Tartares, tracer des routes, rapprocher les distances, etablir une administration vigilante et integre, tirer de ce vaste pays toutes les ressources qu il contient, effacer les lois iniques et appeler a la dignite d homme tant de citoyens desherites, c est la une partie du programme que doit se proposer le cabinet de Saint-Petersbourg. Encore une fois, quelles traditions les serviteurs d Alexandre II trouveront-ils dans leur histoire ? La Russie a-t-elle eu un Colbert, un Turgot, un Robert Peel ? A-t-elle eu du moins des hommes qui eussent pu aspirer a suivre ces grands modeles ? Si elle en a produit, quel a ete le prix de leurs efforts ?.
