Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.MATES IN PARADISE is a comedy about two men who, through their growing friendship, find the courage to trust in themselves and to begin to flourish in the real world. The play begins with Whittler and Evans hanging from their makeshift crosses-trying to decide if they should kill themselves. They resolve to get themselves released from the institution-to enter the real world-and to work together as a team. But it isn't easy. First they have to get out. And to do that, they have to convince Head Nurse Sullivan (and her minion, Irene the Scream) that they are no longer almost crazy. They talk, they practice, they fight, they laugh and they cry. They try their hands at practicing for various occupations: tax consultants, baby doctors, sailors, soldier and race-car drivers. They decide that they should open a coffee shop on the outside: The Paradise Cafe. But-what if only one of them can leave? That's the dilemma that marks the end of Act One. They manage to figure it all out-in a manner of speaking. It takes a few stories from Whittler and one remarkably long story from Evans. It takes some false starts, many doubts, and a lot of soul searching. Mostly, though, it takes courage. The ending, which comes as a bit of a surprise to them, leaves them poised on the edge of their new frontier. MATES IN PARADISE is the second play of my MATES TRILOGY. Each play stands alone - but, collectively, they follow the two main characters lives for six consecutive hours - from seven past seven until seven past one of a very fateful day. The three plays explore the meaning...
