Not illustrated. 1849 Excerpt: .bodies, that the united body might take a new designation, and a recognition of the right of local preachers and leaders to be, as such, members of the circuit quarterly meetings. Mr. Wright, however, maintains that these were extreme demands, which, if granted by the New Connexion, would revolutionize the whole system! Exaggeration is, however, employed by Mr. Wright in describing one of these demands. He says, the Association required-- . the immediate change of the name. The New Connexion was v.illing to change the name as soon as it could be done with safety. The Association required it to be done at once. No matter what the hazard--and legal gentlemen had attested the seriousness of the hazard-- it must be done without delay. p. 9. The italics are Mr. Wright s. Did not Mr. Wright intend to produce the impression, that the change of name was only a question of time, as to the removal of legal difficulties? If his statements have that effect, they will produce false impressions; and I, without hesitation, but not without regret, affirm, that he has in this matter, grossly exaggerated the requirements made by the Association. Mr. Wright says-- The New Connexion was willing to change the name as soon ns it could be done with safety. He then proceeds to describe the impediment to the change as having been exclusively of a legal nature. Now if Mr. Wright had put the word legal before the word safety,...
