Excerpt from Robert Helmont: Diary of a Recluse, 1870-1871 During that hot summer, so exceptionally stormy and scorching, this inaction full of agitation was dreadful, and my anxiety, increased by the accounts of the public disasters which filled the papers that covered my bed, added to my restlessness and sleeplessness. At night the rumble of the distant trains disturbed me like the tread of endless battalions. And by day, pale and sad faces, scraps of conversations overheard in the road or at the neighbour s, through my Open window: The Prussians are at Chalons, mother Jean, and the vans at every moment raising clouds of dust in the quiet little village, lent a mundane and sinister echo to my perusal of the news of the war. Soon we were the only Parisians left at Champrosay, left alone with the peasants, obstinately attached to the land, and still refusing to admit the idea of an invasion. Directly I could leave my couch and be moved, our departure was decided. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
