Brand New Book. Excerpt from Poems and Prose When a man reaches sixty years of age he has seen enough to estimate most Of the things of earth at their real value. If he has any powers of Observation at all he has found that much that seems solid is mere shadow, and much that is subdued and seemingly humble and in the background, is after all the true basis of all the solidity that may belong to human affairs. The frown that would once have daunted him has lost its terror, for he has learned its impotence and the smile that once would have spurred him on to vanity has lost its power, for he has found its emptiness, nay, even perhaps its falsity. SO in presenting this volume to our readers in the autumn of life we do so, not longing for the praise of men, or craving for the blame of others, but just expecting it to be received at its true value, whatever that may be. If...
