D., Before the American Medical Association, at New Orleans, La., May 4, 1868 The same humane and catholic spirit continued during the war to mark the conduct of the members Of this As sociation. Each Of the divided sections met the tasks required by its respective position. But wherever found, whether sharing the hardships of the campaign or dis charging the duties Of private practice, they com prehended the essential difference between what might prove on the one hand a transitory evil, and what on the other hand, they knew would be a lasting good. Accordingly they remained the consistent representatives of a noble brotherhood. If they did not sink the patriot in the physician, they did not sink the physician in the patriot. The imperative instincts of each character true to its trusts and faithful to its requirements, acted for them selves and in the direction Of their own ends. Amid the shouts Of battle and the shock of arms, they raised them selves to the height and grandeur Of their calling,...
