Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Nancy MacIntyre: A Tale of the Prairies Never really liked that Johnson; Now, each time I hear his name, Feel this state s too thickly settled, That is, since that new girl came. If this making love to women Went like breaking in a horse, I might stand some show of winning, cause I ve learned that game, of course; But this moonshine folks call courting, I ain t never played that part; I can t keep from talking foolish When I m thinking with my heart. Now, those women that you read of In these story picture books, They can t ride in roping distance Of that girl in style and looks. They have waists more like an insect, Corset shaped and double cinched; Feet just right to make a watch charm, Small, of course, because they re pinched. This here Nancy s like God made her. She don t wear no saddle girth, But she s supple as a willow, And the purtiest thing on earth. I m in earnest; let me ask you cause I want to reason fair What durn business has that rope-necked Johnson sneaking over there? Hands so soft and strong and tender, When I shook a how de do, They was loaded sure with something Seemed to thrill me through and through; Hair as black as fire-burnt prairie, Eyes that dance and ?ash and ?irt; Every time she smiled she showed you Teeth as White s my Sunday shirt. Baked us biscuits light as cotton; I can t eat mine any more. I must get some better breeches; Kind o shamed of those I wore, But I m goin there to-morrow, Like enough I...
