Excerpt from Notes on Diseases of Women: Specially Designed for Students Preparing for Examination Menstruation (Catamenia, Periods, c). - This is the term applied to the monthly haemorrhagic discharge from the uterus. The menstrual fluid is dark in colour, peculiar in odour, and does not coagulate on account of the vaginal mucus. It consists of blood, epithelium, mucus, serum, and the debris of the membrane lining the uterine cavity - the decidua menstrualis - and is derived from the mucous membrane of the uterus and Fallopian tubes. Just prior to menstruation, the uterus, ovaries, and surrounding erectile tissue become greatly congested, the mucous membrane of the former is excessively developed, forming the decidua menstrualis, which, if impregnation does not take place, exfoliates, causing laceration of its vessels and haemorrhage.
