Excerpt: . ruption of Innis-muighe-samh, or the island of the plum of the sorrel. Here, in the sixth century, St. Nened, or Ninnedth, founded a monastery, which; judging from the remains of earthworks and foundations which may yet be traced, was of great extent and importance. The saint was Ninnidh Saehhruisc (saebhruisc--i.e., torvi oculi), who was of the race of Enda, son of Niall (of the Nine Hostages); and at the 16th of January he is mentioned in the Mart. Taml. as Ninnid Leathderc (i.e., one-eyed). He was a disciple of St. Finnian of Clonard, and was a contemporary of St. Columba. (See Mr. Joyce s book on Irish names, c.) The church appears to have besn Innitnacsaint. a small, oblong structure. Much of the masonry is characteristic of an early period, but there is evidence of the building having been considerably remodelled about the...
