Excerpt from Cystic Disease of the Chorion: With a Tabulation of One Hundred Cases An examination made at this time elicited all the signs of early gestation, including a very soft cervix and a moderate degree of uterine enlargement, about corresponding to, or perhaps, a little over that of the supposed period of pregnancy. The cervix was somewhat patulous and there was a moderate flow of red blood. The diagnosis of a threatened abortion was made, and the patient was given one dram doses of the ?uid extract of Viburnum prunifolium three times daily, and ordered to confine herself to bed until the ?ow had ceased. Three days later, the bleeding having persisted, but without any appreciable increase in the amount, she was given a suppository of the aqueous extract of Opium night and morning. In two days time she reported that there had been no amelioration-of her symptoms. The treatment was continued, and after an absence of nine days she returned on the morning. Of August 3, reporting that there was at that time but a slight fiow, and that she was feeling considerably im proved. It was noted, however, that there was a progressive emacia tion with marked sallowness of the skin. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
