Excerpt: . chapter xxvi the bushies I have known the Australian Bushman for years--as he exists on his native heath. He is not a Bushranger in our sense of the word; neither is he an aboriginal, as some people seem to imagine. The Sydney Daily Telegraph correspondent, who accompanied the first lot round by way of Beira, records his impression of them. He says: -- As an Englishman I have derived much pleasure from the study of the Bushman, and after two months intercourse I have come to the conclusion that he is one of the best fellows in the world--and this after he had laughed me to scorn for drinking tea with milk, and had been unsympathetically mirthful over my ineffectual effort to make damper, or the tasty devils in the coals. He is a tall, raw-boned, good-natured beggar; he can make tea in a period an ordinary man would...
