Excerpt from The City of Dreadful Night The dense smoke hangs low, in the chill of the morning, over an ocean of roofs, and, as the city wakes, there goes up to the smoke a deep, full-throated boom of life and motion and hu manity. For this reason does he who sees Cal outta for the first time hang joyously out of the ticoa-gharm and sniff the smoke, and turn] his face toward the tumult, saying: This is, at last, some portion of my heritage returned to me. This is a city. There is life here, and there should be all manner of pleasant things for the having, across the river and under the smoke. When Leland, he who wrote the Hans Breitmann Ballads, once desired to know the name of an austere, plug-batted redskin of re pute, his answer, from the lips of a half-breed, was.
