This morning 2. in class, 3. the teacher 4. showed us the picture of a hen making a journey in a very unusual manner. The story is said to be a true one. A mother-duck with her little ones was looking for tadpoles, among the flags along the shore of the pond, when a crazy old hen suddenly alighted on her back. This frightened the duck-family so much that they all started in haste for the opposite shore. I judge that the youngsters of the family intend to win the race, as each seems to be putting his best foot forward. The passenger does not seem at ease in her mind in regard to this undertaking. Indeed, she seems to be expecting that the duck will suddenly disappear for another tadpole. In the remaining exercises, follow the general plan of Lesson XXIII. In writing, the pupils are at liberty to improve the story by making changes in the parts, provided they still include the five points given in the outline. LESSON LXV Use for this lesson, a picture showing several kinds of squirrels sporting in the trees, to suggest the ideas required for the story. Observe the general plan of Lesson XXIII, also Lesson LXIV; Outlines IX and X, 4, (1), (2), (3), (4), and (5). Mr. and Mrs. Gray Squirrel s Party Exercise 1 What is the first point in a narrative? What do you think would be the best time in all the...
