Suzkaworld, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Two very different women are about to take you on a journey of extraordinary discoveries. Wonders In Dementialand is an imaginative account about dementia written by a painter who sees life quite differently than most people. It is profoundly intimate and powerfully inventive. Violet is an independent, godly woman living in Chicago: her daughter Suzka is a painter living the bohemian life in a converted warehouse in California. Suzka would have been the last person you would think to be a caregiver. However, when Violet is diagnosed with dementia, Suzka is suddenly left in charge. What follows makes for a novel that is funny, poignant and fascinating in its portrayal of dementia. Dementialand is located in one room, a room with tall windows that stand shoulder-to-shoulder. The windows give a panoramic view of an outside world that Violet is becoming the least bit interested in. Violet detaches herself from the status quo as though she was sitting in a moving train looking out at a passing world with flashbacks to places she once lived from a time she can t remember. Her story alternates between past memories and the present, between dementia s delusions and the artist s imaginative interpretation. The plot is simple enough, but intriguing because there is just so much going on, like dreams flitting from one scene to another. Parts are surreal using dementia as a comic hero called Skeeter, an uncommon approach. Violet meets Skeeter at a crossing terminal between two borders. Like a schoolgirl, she is smitten and scared. But dementia is persistent and romantically pursues Violet. Other parts have dreamlike processions and hallucinatory imagery depicting the facade of life. A strange collection of large cartooned balloons comfortably...
