Excerpt from The New Universal Biographical Dictionary, and American Remembrancer of Departed Merit, Vol. 4 of 4: Containing Complete and Impartial Accounts of the Lives and Writings of the Most Eminent Persons in Every Station, but More Particularly Those Who Have Signalized Themselves in America In his colouring, there is fire, strength, roundness and boldness; but his men want dignity, and his women grace. The good sense of the nation is characterized in his portraits, from which, you may see that he lived in an age when neither enthusiasm nor fervor was predominant. Yet with a pencil so firm, possessed of a numerous and excellent collection of drawings, full of the theory, and profound in reflections on: his art, he drew nothing well below the head, and was void of imagination. His attitudes, draperies and back-grounds are infipid and unmeaning; so ill did he apply to his own practice the fugacious rules and hints he bestowed on others. Though he wrote with fire and judgment, his paintings owed little to either. No man dived deeper into the inexhaustible stores of Raphael, or was more smitten with the native lustre of Vandyck. Yet though capable of tailing the elevation of the one, and the elegance of the other, he could never contrive to see with their eyes, when he was to copy-nature himself. One wonders that he could comment upon their works so well, and imitate them so little. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
