Excerpt from The Geology of the Warwickshire Coalfield and the Permian Rocks and Trias of the Surrounding District The most prominent physical features of the district are formed by the Carboniferous and Permian formations, which form a tract of country slightly elevated above the plain Of New Red Sandstone which surrounds it. The most marked of these features occurs between Nuneaton and Merevale, where the lower Carboniferous rocks form an abrupt ridge rising to an average height of 500 feet above the sea, the north-east side being bounded by a fault, beyond which the New Red Marl stretches in a gently undulating plain, toward Charnwood Forest and Leicester, and the escarpment of the Lias between the latter place and Rugby. On the west side of this tract the Carboniferous and Permian formations form a rising ground, sloping to the west. This is also bounded by a fault, beyond which the New Red Marl extends towards Birmingham. The Permian rocks at one point, viz., at Corley, rise to a height of 625 feet above the sea.
