Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Introductory Lecture Delivered to the Medical Class of the Berkshire Medical Institution: August 5, 1847 It is yet to be seen to what extent free institutions and equality of rights and privileges are to raise our country. Judging from the past, what can be the end of the progress? It is illimitable. What indeed will next come up in the scale of advancement, no mind can tell. The month before the Steam Engine was employed, by the genius of Fulton, in actual operation in navigation, would have presented a scene of the most intense interest, if it could only have been known to the enterprising part of the world what a mighty instrument was being applied to produce changes and results which have astonished the world, and the present light of which is only the dawn of the day to come. So of the American Telegraph: if it could only have been foreseen in its operations and present attained consequences, and if it could have been known that Morse was passing his nights sleepless and agitated as his mind vibrated...
