Many people don't read the important prophesy in the Book of Revelation because it's written with many codes and metaphors that cloud the understanding. And, in their attempt to read the story they ask why it's so coded and so difficult to read. This book decodes those metaphors to allow anyone to read Revelation with clear understanding. Revelation is a book that must be read and understood by those in the Spirit. According to the Words, He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches. These churches refer to all churches, not just those seven churches. There are two major answers to the question; why are there so many codes and metaphors in Revelation. First, it must be recalled that Apostle John wrote Revelation while he was exiled on the Island of Patmos, just off the coast of Asia, which is now the modern country of Turkey. In John's time the nearest city on the mainland was known as Ephesus, which is one of the seven churches to which John addressed his letters. It's also the church city to which he returned when he was released from Patmos when a new emperor controlled Rome. But, while he was writing on Patmos he was watched and controlled by Roman soldiers; therefore he had to be careful with his words. Some were coded to avoid harsher treatment or even death. The second reason many of the words are strange metaphors is because in John's visions he saw things in the future for which there were no names; he saw only the visions. In the first chapter, verse 19, John was instructed to Write the things which...
