Excerpt: .the family of the last Earl, the father of the gentleman at the bar would have inherited the honours of that illustrious house; and, accordingly, I perceive at this moment that he is supported, in this his day of tribulation, by the present possessor of tho honours and fortune of that family, who has chosen to forego the privi Tliis, we believe, was an allusion to the Regent Murray. leges of the peerage, which would have given him a place beside your Lordships, and with great manliness and good taste, has rather preferred tit sit at the bar with his relative and his friend. Nor is the personal character of the prisoner unworthy of these high and hereditary honours. This is a theme on which it is far better for the witnesses to speak than for me. But I must say, that if it fell to the lot of any person to be reduced to the necessity of proving his personal character, there is no man beyond these walls, --aye, there is no man within them-- who could get a more beautiful character, from a greater number of disinterested and spontaneous witnesses, --all tendering their services, from the ranks of his political adversaries, than will be given to the gentleman at the bar. I am not going to bring forward the public thanks which he has got again and again from the public bodies whose business he has done. But the special point of his...
