

Europunk (Hardback)

By Eric de Chassey, Fabrice Stroun

Drago Arts Communication, Italy, 2011. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Eric de Chassey director of the Academy of France at Rome, with Europunk exhibition proposes a trip into the artistic movements during the seventies which brought through alternative, transversal and out of a tradition languages, a tingle of vitality among countries like United Kingdom, France, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and Netherlands. It starts with the Sex Pistols television debut during 1976 first official show date for the Punk movement through the programme So It Goes for the Granada Television of Manchester -- and finishes with the first passage on BBC of Joy Division during 1979. Introducing the catalogue, the Director points out the lack of attention between the marginality of some visual creativities and the worldwide fame for the music of Punk Groups which have proposed with remarkable originality an artistic performance to break with any concept of fashion, style, tradition. The musical history of Punk Groups has been in the glare all over Europe and United States through literature and Internet. The images divulged by different media, fit in the exhibition projects for the strong visual impact, have been considered as an art somehow different. The...
